Building Yesterday's Future—For Everyone

The last time the Worldcon was held in Seattle, in 1961, the future was literally under construction, as across town, the Monorail and Space Needle were being built for the Century 21 Exposition (1962 World's Fair). Life in the Space Age looked groovy. But how did it work out? As we look back on a 64-year gap between Worldcons, we examine yesterday's dreams of tomorrow. We don't miss everything about those days, but we are nostalgic for the sense of optimism. We invite the world to join us in two Seattles: the city it has become, and the multicultural and inclusive version of the city promised by Century 21. By sharing your stories, costumes, arguments, accessories, and artistic creations we will use our imaginations to build yesterday's tomorrow and explore the wonders of the 21st century.
